AN INSIDER'S GUIDE TO
AMERICA'S BEST MOUNTAINS

Brunton HeatSync Vital $80

Slip the Vital heating vest between your jacket and base layers, press a button, and—voilà!—you're supremely toasty. The 8.6-ounce unit holds a temperature of 113 degrees for over four hours, making it ideal for extreme conditions and emergencies or other low-movement situations. The fit is loose on slim torsos but still warms them up just fine. brunton.com

Cobra JumPack $130

Lots of pocket-size chargers can bring a dead phone back to life. The JumPack can also jump-start your car or SUV, pumping up to 400 amps of current to your battery through the included cables. The unit has six months of standby storage capacity and will repower a phone or tablet four times via a 2.1-amp USB port. It also does triple duty as an LED flashlight. cobra.com

180s Bluetooth Gen 2 $80

These speakerized earmuffs wrap around your head, with easy adjustability for different noggin sizes, and fit under a ski helmet, too, streaming music from your phone and (as of this year) using Siri or Google Now voice activation. Best of all, they sound just as good as your high-end earbuds but are much more comfortable. 180s.com

Mophie Space Pack from $150

This modest case superpowers an iPhone, doubling the battery life and adding 16, 32, or 64 gigs of memory. Video, photos, music, and even documents can be stored on the Space Pack using a free app that also provides access to them. All that and the case offers decent shock protection. For iPhone 5; mophie.com

Jabra Solemate Max $300

This Dolby Digital wireless speaker had both the best sound and the longest battery life (up to a full day) among this year's models. The water-resistant unit features a sturdy handle built into the side and grips any surface you place it on with a rubberized, sneaker-like base that also resists shock if you drop it. At 6.6 pounds the Solemate Max isn't light, but the heft is worth it for the bass-rich oomph. jabra.com

DeLorme InReach Explorer $379

Pair the InReach Explorer with your phone and you can send and receive texts from anywhere on earth via the Iridium satellite network. It also functions as a navigation device (albeit with a clunky interface), lets friends track your progress online, and can send an SOS to an international emergency-response center. Subscription required. inreachdelorme.com
